

Since ancient civilization, people in many cultures have celebrated a holiday in honor of motherhood. The Greeks celebrated in honor of the mother of the gods, Rhea. Romans celebrated Cybele, the mother goddess, in late March. The people of the British Isles and Celtic Europe celebrated the goddess Brigid with a spring Mother's Day.

Mom for Eternity

A special day is coming for the most remarkable women in our lives! The second Sunday in May is a day of celebrating mothers around the world.

The moment we were brought into this wonderful journey we call life; our Mothers were there for our every waking moment. It is with much love, inspiration, patience, understanding and so much more that our Mothers, those precious women in our lives, have raised us to be who we are today.

There is no love like a Mother's love, so steadfast and strong. A Mother's love is very patient and forgiving and a Mother doesn't judge you, even if you are wrong. A Mother is there for you showing love and hope throughout the smiles and tears, joy and disappointments. By and by, their trust and pride is forever shining and their selfless acts are shown time and again.

The role of a Mother is one that is priceless and rewarding, and one that is also challenging. I am sure that some of us probably caused our mom's heartache and a grey hair or two along our road to independence. I look back and I can still see the joy and pride in my Mother's face but I can also remember the look of worry and heartache my actions caused in certain times.

As the years pass and being a mom to two young toddlers, I more and more appreciate and value what my own Mother experienced as she raised me. The sacrifices she made for me, the selfless generosity she bestowed on me, and on and on I could go. If I can be half the Mother my mom is to me!

How can we thank them for all that they have done for us? Will there ever be a word, gesture or gift that will fully express our appreciation and love? I sincerely doubt that there will ever be anything that will express the true emotions and appreciation that we have for our Mothers.
